

FASHION ELABORATES ON THE FLIRTATIOUS FAN

*Angels
Eagle Quills*

THE fan has ever been an important aid to woman's coquetry. In fact, one may believe that Eve was clever enough to design an instrument of flirtation which, in present-day language, would be termed a fan. There have been fans of various shapes, sizes and materials. In the days of Louis XIV the folding fan was first created and was given the name brise, which is the French for folding. For these fans ivory sticks were used and over them were stretched kid decorated with jewels. It is the folding fan which is claiming so much attention at the present time after last year's devotion to the single-stick fan. This latter style, by the way, is a relic of Egyptian days when the feathered fan was brought into prominence. Thus the employment of feathers and of folding sticks combines the fashions of two centuries. Dame Fashion cleverly elaborates on both ideas and creates an accessory which women can use to chic advantage when in a flirtatious mood.

*More Fan
Than Girl*

An example of the size which fans have assumed is the one of white ostrich feathers. Each feather is attached to a tortoise stick, a material which is very much in vogue for the fashioning of fan frames. All the sticks radiate from a tortoise bracelet.

It is quite evident that the ostrich feather fan is the one of the moment. A very unique model is the one made of plumes, which curve at the tips in a most graceful manner. The feathers are gray, while the sticks are ebony.

A wealth of eagle quills are to be found in the brownish-black fan, with its black sticks. This type of fan is conspicuous because of its contrast with the fluffy models.

Closely resembling the shape of a butterfly is the white fan of silk. This is brightened with silver spangles and is finished with a tassel formed of white beads.

Gorgeous is the word to describe the beauty of the two-toned feather fans. They are made in gray-and-white, black-and-white, black-and-gray, and so on. The black-and-white fan pictured is made of feathers of varying lengths. The sticks are yellow.

Since fans form such an important chapter in fashion's story, every woman should possess at least one to supplement her evening gown.

Better Farming Is Being Taught

Albera Institutions Are Working Along Practical Lines

Harvesting back to the days of the little red school-house (the purchase of which was a matter of course) the curriculum which adhered to the old-fashioned method of education, and which was more or less directly with the historic "R's," and a slender, but plausible, "G's." Good men were produced under the system, but it is a fact that the present age, which the system produced them, is not in a position to follow, and extends partially into the present age, showed the essentials of perfection to any practical degree so far as it concerned the rank and file.

The system of education which aims at the development of the hand as well as the mind; at the training of young manhood and womanhood for everyday life, rather than for professional careers, is comparatively new in practice, if not in thought, and there are still with us those who look askance upon workbenches and tools as well as upon the schools, where these unquestionably play the partial card of a curriculum, rather than the law, medicine, military or teaching as the fairs in every text book. The introduction of the practical and vocational systems of training in city schools has been the most marked success throughout the country, but in the lessons of the European war, which yet remains much to be accomplished in the public and in the schools, it is a fact that, even though the schools of agriculture and vocational training have been established, and the provincial government and situated at Vermilion, Alberta, and in the town, are accomplishing a great deal toward the betterment of farming conditions and toward the training of young men and women for practical and more scientific methods of farm homes and fields.

For many years, agricultural education was regarded as unnecessary and impracticable. While there were even today many who held such systems of instruction as a waste of money and time, the average farmer has become progressively enough to seek for more information, and better methods of raising stock and growing crops. He recognizes such information as being of value to a considerable extent by special investigations and by the fact that he is anxious also that his children may take advantage of the opportunity afforded by such education, and that the schools of agriculture as have been provided by the provincial government, are undoubtedly these graduates become more and more interested in their work from their course of training and thereby become more valuable on their own farms and in the community. It is for this type of progress that the schools of agriculture are being organized.

The agricultural subjects are taken up, as in practical, feeding and care of live stock, raising of dairy and poultry, horticulture, weed seed identification and eradication, and elementary chemistry in English, mathematics, bookkeeping, chemistry and physics. Babylonian Extravagance

New York City, Fighting the High Cost of Living, Spends Money Like Water

New York is rolling, reeling, rollicking in wealth. The United Press wires that New York's banks today have reserves of $816,794,200, and from every corner of the globe the money is pouring in—actual yellow gold by the million to be changed from the coin of other nations into the coin of the United States.

Wall street has become a gambling table on which the money of the world is being won and lost. Money from the earnings, winnings and savings of Americans and money from the millions of dollars.

While the large majority of New York's six millions are winning the universal desperate battle with the cost of living, on the other hand, the few who are able to make money that everybody has money to spend. They are spending it for restaurants and luxuries.

Military Compulsion in United States Advocated

Danger as Based on Development of Canadian Forces and Anglo-Japanese Alliance

Advocate and opponents of a system of military compulsion in the United States are now in a hot race to replace the volunteers system as the mainstay of the nation's defense. The United States Military Commission, which was organized for universal training, which is supposed to be a system of military compulsion, is now in a hot race to replace the volunteers system as the mainstay of the nation's defense.

Major-General Scott, Chief of Staff of the army, detailed to the committee to study the plan of education, which is now being considered, and extended partially into the present age, showed the essentials of perfection to any practical degree so far as it concerned the rank and file.

The system of education which aims at the development of the hand as well as the mind; at the training of young manhood and womanhood for everyday life, rather than for professional careers, is comparatively new in practice, if not in thought, and there are still with us those who look askance upon workbenches and tools as well as upon the schools, where these unquestionably play the partial card of a curriculum, rather than the law, medicine, military or teaching as the fairs in every text book.

Help Northern Indians Along in Agriculture

Plan Is to Aid Them as a Means of Making Them Permanent

Believing that there will be an influx of settlers in the country along the Great Canadian Waterway, the Indian Affairs Department has recommended that Indians be encouraged to settle in the agricultural belt of the country.

The most effective method of assisting the Indians to become agriculturists would be to appoint a farm instructor to have direct supervision of the Indians, and to grant them a certain measure of assistance in the form of agricultural implements, seed grain. The lands surveyed for Indian reserves between Edmonton and McMurray a year or more ago are reported quite suitable for the needs of the natives, who are now free from the annoyance of white settlers and are able to make a living for themselves and are being urged to settle themselves within their loss of time.

It is a bit surprising to learn, on the other hand, that the Indians of Alberta, as a whole are increasing in numbers, industry and prosperity, in contrast to the Indians of the Northwest Territories, who are decreasing in numbers.

Employment of German Prisoners in Great Britain

The question of the employment of German prisoners to meet the demand in the labor market in Britain was recently raised in the House of Lords by Earl Grey, who also asked what were the numbers at present in the country.

Lord Newton, assistant secretary of the foreign office, gave the numbers as 25,441 naval and military prisoners, and 31,443 civilians, of whom 20,000 were Germans. A few of these had been employed and the work proved satisfactory. There were no difficulties in the way of giving work for the bulk of these prisoners, however. The war office had ordered that soldiers should only be employed in batches of one hundred in order that they might be properly guarded; then the "radicals" opposed the employment of any class of men at less than their fixed rates of pay, and the powerful anti-German feeling prevailing would render their employment difficult in an attitude he could scarcely understand. The fear of their escape was, he thought, exaggerated. They would welcome useful employment. He hoped they would be put to work in his efforts to have these men used for the benefit of the country, as their present idleness was a burden to the country.

Cattle Herds in Great Britain to Be Reduced

Campaign Under Way to Increase National Food Supply by Land Cultivation

Signs that Great Britain is preparing energetically to increase the national food supply are found in the fact that many municipal bodies are setting aside land for the production of cereals and potatoes, while a vigorous campaign to restrict herds of cattle and sheep is being conducted.

Measures now contemplated comprise a reduction of herds and an increase in the production of cereals and potatoes. The measures now contemplated comprise a reduction of herds and an increase in the production of cereals and potatoes.
